The objective of this study was to describe the implementation of a community-based integrated care model within the UNICEF Baby-Friendly Hospital Initiative (BFHI) and examine the effect of the intervention on breastfeeding (BF) initiation and duration. Baby-Friendly Cafés were implemented for 9 months in 4 districts in Palmas, Tocantins, Brazil. The intervention included 1) providing lactation support through identification of BF children and family advocacy; 2) enhanced knowledge of BF using educational materials, dietary interventions, and the provision of formula milk; and 3) the adoption and maintenance of the hospital's policy and practice for BF. The intervention was implemented in 3 hospitals and 1 health clinic. Follow-up occurred from 2 to 5 months postpartum. The breastfeeding rates increased from 60.1% to 71.8% (P Couple Marries During General Session - Part 2 During Friday's general session, Jerry and Sandie Stephens, husband and wife, were wed in a brief ceremony attended by the thousands of people who had gathered to attend the event.
